Joshua Project gets $11K

By Jim Poole

Christmas came early for The Joshua Project last week.

The organization whose mission is to help those in need received $11,000 from Arby's on Wednesday.

The presentation came at the Cobleskill restaurant on East Main Street.

Arby's owners Jack and Lynda Malone credited the restaurant's general managers Connie Flanagan and John Diamond for getting the donation to The Joshua Project.

Arby's has a foundation and asks its restaurants in the region to nominate a charity to receive an award.

"They did all the legwork," said Ms. Malone said of the general managers, "so it goes back to the community. They took the extra step."

Ms. Flanagan picked The Joshua Project because the organization "helped out kids so much."

Led by Pat Costello of Middleburgh, The Joshua Project provided free lunches to children in the summer. The thrust is to feed kids who might not get a full meal when school's out.

"We did 8,000 lunches through Schoharie County this summer," Mr. Costello said.

With several dozen Joshua volunteers on hand and many Arby's employees watching, Ms. Flanagan said Arby's creed is to "play fair, have fun, make a difference, and it's our responsibility to improve the quality of life for our employees and our community."

Overwhelmed, Mr. Costello said he was "extremely happy to be here," adding that the $11,000 would pay for 90 percent of the summer program in 2020.

"It's a tremendous relief," he said. "You guys will help us go another year. Thank you."

The summer lunch program isn't The Joshua Project's only task.

"We have 150 to 160 volunteers working with us every year, and we do have fun," he said, echoing Ms. Flanagan's description of Arby's creed.
